Helen Garner

'The Joan Didion of Australia' - The Atlantic

'One of the most fascinating writers I have come across in recent years.' - Dua Lipa

'What gives her writing its power is that she is unsparing, in equal measure, of her subject and of herself.' - James Wood, New Yorker

Helen Garner is a beloved and critically acclaimed writer of novels, stories, screenplays and works of non-fiction and is widely regarded as one of the greatest writers of our age. In 2016 she won the prestigious Windham-Campbell Prize for non-fiction and The Atlantic named her 'the Joan Didion of Australia'.

In 2019 she was honoured with the Australia Council Award for Lifetime Achievement in Literature. Her works include The Children's Bach, This House of Grief and The Spare Room.

Helen Garner is published in the US by Pantheon and in the UK by Weidenfeld & Nicolson. Her work has been translated into more than 15 languages.

Joe Cinque's Consolation

'A writer's profound response to a tragedy' - The Age

In October 1997 a clever young law student made a bizarre plan to murder her devoted boyfriend after a dinner party at their house. Some of the dinner guests-most of them university students-had heard rumours of the plan. Nobody warned Joe Cinque.

He died one Sunday, in his own bed, of a massive dose of rohypnol and heroin. His girlfriend and her best friend were charged with murder. Helen Garner followed the trials in the ACT Supreme Court. The result is a masterwork from one of Australia's greatest writers.

The First Stone

'This is writing of great boldness...an intense, eloquent and enthralling work' - The Australian

In the autumn of 1992, two young women students at Melbourne University went to the police claiming that they had been indecently assaulted at a party. The man they accused was the head of their co-educational residential college.

The controversial book that Helen Garner wrote about the resulting Ormond College sexual harassment case sparked a raging debate about sexual harassment, making it easy to see why even now, decades later, the book is no less sharp, no less relevant, and no less divisive. The First Stone exposes the generational divisions between feminists that continue to this day.

Patrick White

'A strong case could be made for White as the finest and most profound novelist anywhere in the world now working in English.' - The Washington Post

'A prophet, and from his sublime mountaintop, he sent down lightning bolts on our callow heads.' - Thomas Keneally

Patrick White was born in England in 1912 and taken to Australia, where his father owned a sheep farm, when he was six months old. He was educated in England at Cheltenham college and King's College, Cambridge and returned to Australia after WW2.

He was the first Australian to win the Nobel Prize for Literature, in 1973, and is considered one of the foremost novelists of the twentieth century. He published thirteen novels (one posthumously), three short-story collections and eight plays.

The great poet of Australian landscape, he turned its vast empty spaces into great mythic landscapes of the soul. His novels have been translated into more than 25 languages, and published around the world to great acclaim.

VINTAGE WHITE

Voss

'A work of genius. Voss has an epic quality, the ageless sense of power and pride of man battling with his condition.' - Observer

White's most translated novel, widely regarded as having brought Australian literature a global audience. Set in nineteenth-century Australia, Voss is the story of the secret passion between an explorer and a naïve young woman. From the careful delineation of Victorian society to the sensitive rendering of hidden love to the stark narrative of adventure in the Australian desert, Patrick White's novel is a work of extraordinary power and virtuosity. The result is a masterwork from one of Australia's greatest writers.

The Eye of the Storm

'An antipodean King Lear writ gentle and tragicomic, almost Chekhovian...The Eye of the Storm [is] an intensely dramatic masterpiece' - The Australian

An ex-socialite in her eighties has a mystical experience during a summer storm in Sydney which transforms all her relationships: her existence becomes charged with a meaning which communicates itself to those around her. From this simple scenario Patrick White unfurls a monumental exploration of the tides of love and hate, comedy and tragedy, impotence and longing that fester within family relationships. Adapted into a successful feature film directed by Fred Schepesi and starring Judy Davis, Geoffrey Rush and Charlotte Rampling.

Patrick White

Riders in the Chariot

'Riders in the Chariot is the most compassionate and the most beautiful of all Patrick White's works; colours fly everywhere; his words, comic, ecstatic, are like the brushstrokes on a canvas by Nolan or Blake.' – Colm Tóibín

Through the crumbling ruins of the once splendid Xanadu, Miss Hare wanders, half-mad. In the wilderness she stumbles upon an Aboriginal artist and a Jewish refugee. They place themselves in the care of a local washerwoman. In a world of pervasive evil, all four have been independently damaged and discarded. Now in one shared vision they find themselves bound together, understanding the possibility of redemption.

The Tree of Man

'A timeless work of art from which no essential element of life has been omitted.' – The New York Times

Stan Parker, with only a horse and a dog for companions, journeys to a remote scrubby patch of land that he has inherited in the Australian hills. When the land is cleared enough for a rudimentary house to be built, Stan brings his new wife, Amy, to the wilderness. Together they struggle to establish a home for themselves and their growing family.

And together, but essentially apart, they face everything from the domestic upheavals of birth and death to natural disasters. In this chronicle of simple lives in joy and sorrow, Patrick White creates an evocative monument to human endurance.

'To read Patrick White...is to touch a source of power, to move through areas made new and fresh, to see men and women with a sharpened gaze.'

Daily Telegraph

Di Morrissey

'In the 25 years since the release of her first book ... no Australian woman has sold more novels in this country.' - Sydney Morning Herald

'There's no denying the beauty and opulence of Morrissey's rendering of place...She is a master of the genre.' - Weekend Australian

Di Morrissey is one of the most successful authors Australia has ever produced, with sales of over 3 million copies across thirty books. Her great love for Australia, its people and varied landscapes have been the catalyst for her novels. All her books feature strong female characters and each has been a bestseller.

In 2017 Di was inducted into the Australian Book Industry Hall of Fame and presented with the Lloyd O'Neil Award. Only six other authors have been honoured with this award; they include Peter Carey, Thomas Keneally and Ruth Park. In 2019 Di was made a Member of the Order of Australia for significant services to literature. Her books have been translated into French (L'Archipel) and German (Droemer Knaur).

The Endless Sky

The 31st novel from Australia's favourite storyteller. TV presenter Nicole and her savvy producer and friend Stacie suddenly find themselves under the rule of a new boss ... he's arrogant, patronising and out to prove he's in charge. Their challenge? To create a hit show revealing the hidden heart of outback Australia.

What begins as a career-defining adventure quickly spirals into something far more dangerous and unexpected. In a land of craggy rocks and vast plains, Nicole and Stacie uncover secrets - how other lives are lived, fossil treasures deep in the red earth, a possible murder and a blossoming love story.

The Night Tide

A heartfelt tale of secrets, mystery and community in an idyllic Sydney waterway. A secluded and peaceful waterside community faces turmoil as corporate greed threatens to undo generations of heritage. Tensions mount as the community's way of life is threatened.

Meanwhile, in the city, Dom Cochrane is made redundant and retreats to a quiet bay to recover. Far from being the relaxing break he expected, Dom becomes embroiled in a tragic family mystery as money sharks circle treasured old family homes. As Dom investigates, secrets are exposed and old wounds reopened. Can he unravel what really happened so many years ago, or have the secrets been swept away on the dark night tide?

Di Morrissey

A Distant Journey

'One of Morrissey's best tales yet.' – Australian Women's Weekly

In 1962 Cindy drops out of college to impulsively marry Australian grazier Murray Parnell, moving from the glamorous world of Palm Springs, California, to an isolated sheep station on the sweeping plains of the Riverina in New South Wales.

As she adjusts to her new life, Cindy realises that the Parnells are haunted by a mystery that has never been solved. When she finally uncovers the shocking truth, tragedy hits, and Cindy finds herself fighting to save the land that she has grown to love as her own.

Before the Storm

'A gripping, twisting yarn.' – Australian Women's Weekly

Face her demons? Or run? After being double-crossed by a devious colleague, career woman Ellie Conlan quits her job on principle. With no idea what to do next, she retreats to an idyllic beach town.

In Storm Harbour Ellie is drawn into a story about a development which could split the coastal community – and involves her with the influential O'Neill family – an event she has long suppressed threatens to overwhelm her.

Dark clouds gather as rumours fly and tensions mount. And when a violent storm breaks and rages, Ellie will finally have to confront her past.

Liz Byrski

‘The strength of Liz Byrski’s novels lies in their inherent relatability, from her well-developed characters, the lives they lead and the gentle but thought-provoking stories of everyday life she tells’ – Courier Mail

‘By turns turbulent and tender...warm, funny, flawed heroes and heroines grappling with the cards destiny has dealt them.’ – West Australian

Dr Liz Byrski A.M. is a novelist, non-fiction writer, former journalist and ABC broadcaster, with more than fifty years experience in the British and Australian media. She is the author of eleven bestselling novels, including Gang of Four, Family Secrets, The Woman Next Door, and her most recent release, A Month of Sundays. She is also the author of a dozen non-fiction books.

Liz’s books have been published in the UK, France and Germany and her articles and essays have appeared in national and international publications. She has won several awards for her work as a print and radio journalist.

Lost and Found

Rose Walters has never taken a leap of faith quite like this one – she is flying home to England for the first time in decades to search for her first love. But what she finds there is far from what she expected.

When Rose turns up at her door, Dora Stutchbury is not sure she's willing to rake over the coals of the past – especially those she has taken care to let lie for so long. But both women are about to be surprised as an unlikely friendship shows them a way forward – and finally unearths some answers to questions about the past, an absent son and lover, and the women themselves.

Last Chance Café

When Margot spots a woman who has chained herself to the escalator of a shopping mall, she recognises Dot immediately – from the campaigning days of their youth. Dot is in despair at the abandonment of the sisterhood and the sight of five-year-olds with false eyelashes. She's still a fierce campaigner, but she isn't sure where to direct her rage. Meanwhile Margot holds a haunting resentment that her youthful ambitions have always been shelved to attend to the needs of others.

With aching empathy, Liz Byrski assembles a fallible cast of characters who are asking the questions we ask ourselves. What does it mean to grow older? Are we brave enough to free ourselves from the pressure to stay young? And is there ever a stage in life when we can just be ourselves?

Liz Byrski

A Month of Sundays

For over ten years, Ros, Adele, Judy and Simone have been in an online book club, but they have never met face to face. Until now...

Determined to enjoy her imminent retirement, Adele invites her fellow bibliophiles to help her house-sit in the Blue Mountains. Each member has been asked to bring a book which will teach the others more about her.

With the women all facing crossroads in their lives, it turns out there's a lot for them to learn, not just about their fellow book-clubbers, but about themselves.

The Woman Next Door

Over the years, the residents of Emerald Street have become more than just neighbours, they have built lasting friendships over a drink and chat on their back verandahs.

Now, a new chapter begins with the children having left home. Helen and Dennis have downsized into an apartment by the river. For Joyce and Mac, the empty nest has Joyce craving a new challenge, while Mac fancies retirement on the south coast. Meanwhile, Polly embarks on a surprising long-distance relationship.

With her trademark warmth and wisdom, Liz Byrski involves us in the lives and loves of Emerald Street, and reminds us what it is to be truly neighbourly.

Based on a searing new play from the writer of Prima Facie

Jessica Parks is smart, compassionate, a true maverick at the top of her career as an eminent London Crown Court Judge. At work she's changing and challenging the system one case at a time. But behind the robe, Jessica is a karaoke fiend, a loving wife and a supportive parent.

While managing the impossible juggling act faced by every working mother, an event threatens to throw her life completely off balance. Can she hold her family upright?

Based on the National Theatre production starring Oscar-nominated Rosamund Pike, Inter Alia is a searing examination of modern masculinity and motherhood.

Praise for Inter Alia:

'Inter Alia at the National is theatre's gut-wrenching spin on Adolescence.' - The Telegraph

'Hits home thoughtfully and forcefully' - Time Out

'A scorching drama, merciless in its dissection of our broken system, but deeply compassionate towards the people at its heart.' - London Theatre

Tessa is a thoroughbred. A young, brilliant barrister from a working-class background now at the top of her game: defending, cross-examining and lighting up the shadows of doubt in any case. The law is a game and she is its most talented player.

One sickening night, though, Tessa finds herself in a position countless women – one in three – have been in before her. And she's faced with a gut-wrenching, life-changing decision. Will she take the stand to testify about her rape, with the full awareness that the system has not been built to protect her?

Drawn from the internationally acclaimed play, Prima Facie is a propulsive, raw look at the price victims pay for speaking out and the system that sets them up to fail. With breakneck prose and a devastating emotional intensity, this is a novel for our times.

Inspired by the real theft of Picasso's The Weeping Woman from the National Gallery of Victoria in 1986, The Picasso Ransom imagines an alternate history in which three art-loving senior citizens pull off the theft and ransom of the most expensive painting ever purchased by an Australian gallery.

Phoebe Wood is a few weeks shy of her 70th birthday, and has begun to feel a certain restlessness creeping into her retirement years. She enrolls in an evening still life painting course, where she finds connection to a new community, new friends, and a chance for romance.

But when the class receives news of impending budget cuts and learns that their beloved art school is about to be closed down, Phoebe, along with two of her mature-age classmates, Eva and Dave, decide to take matters into their own hands.

What follows is a cosy-crime caper featuring a media frenzy, police on the case, a series of outlandish ransom letters, a rival student anarchist group and a budding romance. It's a wild ride around the streets of Melbourne with three unforgettable lead characters.

A. T. Prewett completed his Master of Film & Television in 2009 and was presented with the coveted Victorian College of the Arts Best Achievement in Direction, as well as Best Documentary Script. His writing has appeared in Rolling Stone AU/NZ, The Big Issue and Political Animal, among others. By day he teaches music at a high school in Melbourne.

Prewett's short story 'The Weeping Woman' appeared in The Big Issue's 2024 Fiction Edition. The Picasso Ransom stemmed directly from this story.

A portrait of a changing world, and a love story for the ages – from the award-winning author of Lucky's.

In the fading glow of Australia's print journalism era, The National is more than a newspaper – it's an institution, and the only place that George Desoulis has ever felt at home. A world-weary subeditor with a poetic streak and a painful past, George is one of nature's loners.

But a late-night encounter with a journalist named Cassandra begins to unravel his carefully managed solitude. As his colleagues depart and the paper's decline becomes final, George is obliged to navigate an affair, learn to care for a teenage daughter who has only recently become part of his life, and reckon with his own childhood trauma.

Told with wit, irony and tender restraint, The Transformations is a novel about endings – of careers, relationships, illusions – and the chance of new beginnings.

For readers of Jennifer Egan, Jonathan Franzen and Christos Tsiolkas.

'Intelligent, disarming and capacious...a searching, fate-filled epic for our times.' - Mireille Juchau

'One of Australia's best novelists.' - Malcolm Knox

'Beautifully written, intimate and humane.' - Chris Womersley

Andrew Pippos is a Sydney-based writer who lectures in creative writing at the University of Technology Sydney. His writing has appeared in Meanjin, The Sydney Review of Books, Catapult and Electric Literature.

His debut novel, Lucky's, won The Readings Prize for Australian Fiction, and was shortlisted for the 2021 Miles Franklin award, and the Prime Minister's Literary award.

(HarperCollins Australia)

Winner of the inaugural The Australian Fiction Prize

'It's a sweeping, beautiful and emotional novel of the struggle between independence and control, nature, love and courage, which echoes Where the Crawdads Sing, The Last Migration and The Lost Flowers of Alice Hart.' - Catherine Milne, Head of Fiction at HarperCollins Australia

Every Wild Soul tells the story of a remote Tasmanian island, a teenage daughter kept captive by her overprotective father, and a handsome shipwreck survivor who is not who he seems. Against the backdrop of a mysterious death, this propulsive and emotional novel charts a young woman's perilous attempt to break away from an island she loves.

The novel opens with a dawn storm and a boat wreck. Min (18) witnesses the wreck but, not allowed out at night by Piers, her overprotective father and Maria Island head ranger, she lies and says that she saw the incident from their cottage. A young man is missing.

Also witness to the wreck is Werner (30s), a homeless biologist who is determined to catalogue the island's animal species before development takes hold. Werner has been a second father to Min since childhood after Min's mother left, and Piers is jealous. Werner has a loyal, global following, visitors he has healed and inspired with his love of nature. Piers wants Werner evicted, particularly after Werner discovers a plot to bring back the Tasmanian tiger (thylacine) using the endangered Tasmanian devil as a surrogate.

The young man missing from the boat wreck that Min witnessed washes ashore. Min naively believes that the survivor, Fergus, has arrived by fate and will fall in love with her, but, for others on the island, alarm bells are ringing.

Katherine Johnson is an award-winning Tasmanian novelist and feature writer. Her novels include Pescador's Wake, The Better Son, Matryoshka and Paris Savages. She has won HarperCollins Varuna Manuscript Development Awards and Tasmanian Literary Awards.

Paris Savages was shortlisted in the 2020 Australian Book Industry Awards (ABIA), and was published in the UK, the US and Italy. The UK edition was named The Times Historical Fiction Book of the Month in July 2020. The Better Son was longlisted in the Australian Indie Book Awards.

Katherine has degrees in science and journalism, and holds a PhD in creative writing. Her feature articles have been published in The Conversation, Good Weekend, Island magazine and Forty South.

A powerful debut about first love and second chances

Alex and Leah meet at medical school and form an immediate and intense connection. Over the course of four years, they are caught in the push-pull of passion and betrayal, longing and reunion. Neither can quite give up the relationship, even as they question whether they are good for each other.

Years later, when Alex and Leah are drawn together once more, will they make the right choice?

New Skin evokes a coming of age in the 1990s and charts the course of first love and its power to shape who we become. Spare and compelling, this powerful debut introduces a dazzling new voice in Australian fiction.

'Brutally passionate and profoundly heartfelt' - Amy Taylor

'Capturing each surge, halt, spin and derangement of youthful romance, Miranda Nation's beautifully attentive nouveau grunge novel offers us two people, their innocence and instinct, and all the ways they can pull each other apart –and together.' - Kate Holden

'Nation has created two fascinating characters and an intellectually provocative, sexy story... intensely and insistently sensual and ferociously honest' - Sydney Arts Guide

Miranda Nation is an award-winning writer and director. Originally working as an actor, Miranda trained at Jacques Lecoq in Paris (2003–05), before shifting her focus to writing and directing, completing a Graduate Diploma in Directing at the Australian Film, Television and Radio School (2010).

Miranda's original six-part series as creator/writer/EP, Playing Gracie Darling, will premiere on Paramount+ in 2025.

Miranda's critically acclaimed debut feature as writer/director, Undertow, premiered at Melbourne International Film Festival and was released in cinemas in early 2020. Her short film, Perception, won the Dendy Award for Best Short Film at the 2014 Sydney Film Festival.

Miranda has a slate of feature and long-form projects in development with leading production houses.

All That Remains of Her

Nakita Kitson

FICTION | LITERARY

Forthcoming 2027

Approx. 70,000 words

Available mid-2026

Rights held: World

Rights sold: Australia and New Zealand (Picador)

A thrilling and exhilarating historical fiction novel about one woman, alone in nature.

All That Remains of Her follows an English woman trying to survive after the failure of a tiny settlement in remote 1840s Western Australia. Alone and dependent on the remote southwest environment for food and shelter, Georgie's life is quickly at stake. As her mental and physical state deteriorate, her neatly penned and controlled story unravels. We learn of her love for G., a Minang leader and negotiator, and the drastic actions she took to free herself from the constraints of marriage and society. Over the course of the six Noongar seasons, Georgie struggles, triumphs, makes mistakes, and ultimately learns to listen to the land.

While the book is set in 1840, Georgie's story allegorically reflects contemporary themes of isolation and yearning to reconnect with nature. Every change in weather, animals, and plant life is closely observed, and these details organically shape the plot of the novel. The powerful granite coastline and karri forests are their own characters in the story, illuminating and echoing Georgie's internal landscape.

The novel was written soon after Nakita was diagnosed with Autism, and realised that her deep need to be alone in nature was because there she didn't need to mask. She worked on the book after spending time in the same landscape and with the assistance and guidance of Wardandi matriarch Nan Vivian Brockman Webb. She is deeply invested in using historical texts and oral histories to create an accurate and interesting representation of Noongar knowledge, history and culture.

All That Remains of Her is a perfect read for fans of Kate Grenville, Robbie Arnott and Richard Powers.

Nakita Kitson's writing reflects on her experience as a queer, Autistic woman living on Wardandi Boodjar, on the southwestern tip of Western Australia. Her perspective brings landscapes into vivid detail, exploring the ways humans and places intersect, heal and hurt each other.

Nakita's background is in teaching Literature, curriculum writing, and running Stellar Foundation, an education and community development organisation in Cambodia. She lives with her found family and her own loyal hound.

Brandon Jack played for the Sydney Swans for five years. He is a musician and journalist who writes for Nine newspapers and the Guardian.

Nothing like this has ever happened at a footy club. Honest.

The embittered fringe players of the ██████████ Football Club follow rules of their own. Kidnapping a teammate's dog for a gag. Taking potent painkiller suppositories to get through the living nightmare of a sponsors' event. Ticking off their Pissants bingo cards to survive the weirdness of meetings with the club psych. Fangs, Stick, Squidman and Shaggers speak in a cryptic code of inside jokes and WhatsApp exchanges, chained to each other by their place on the outskirts of the team.

Together, these characters present a jaw-dropping snapshot of life within the chaotic world of a professional sports club. The psychotic rituals. The dementing clichés. The adulation. The pressure. The broken staff. The despair. The towering egos. The flatlining sexual encounters. The life-saving friendships.

Trainspotting gets munted with A Visit from the Goon Squad in Ted Lasso's Front Bar in this brutally hilarious, unhinged and at times surprisingly moving insider's glimpse into one anonymous footy club – and what might happen behind the headlines, off the field and out of sight.

'Brandon Jack has talent and daring in abundance' – Christos Tsiolkas

'The footballer's language knocked me around with its fantastical crudity and wildness; yet under its foul-mouthed, laughing bravado lie deep wounds, a humble and endearing loneliness that moved me.' – Helen Garner

'The action often resembles the pitch-black comedy of Quentin Tarantino or the Coen Brothers' – ABC

A chilling black comedy set in Stalin's Soviet Union.

The Soviet Union 1938: Lavrentiy Beria, 'The Boss' of the Georgian republic, nervously prepares a Black Sea resort for a visit from 'The Boss of Bosses', his fellow Georgian Josef Stalin. Under escalating pressure from enemies and allies alike, Beria slowly but surely descends into murderous paranoia.

By his side is Vasil Murtov, Beria's closest friend since childhood. But to be a witness is dangerous; Murtov must protect his family and play his own game of survival while remaining outwardly loyal to an increasingly unstable Beria. The tension ramps up as Stalin's visit and the inevitable bloodbath approaches. Is Murtov playing Beria, or is he being played?

The First Friend is a novel in a time of autocrats, where reality is a fiction created by those who rule. Reflecting on Putin's Russia, Trump's America, Xi's China and Murdoch's planet Earth, it is at once a satire and a thriller, a survivor's tale in which a father has to walk a tightrope every day to save his family from a monster and a monstrous society. Where safety lies in following official fictions, is a truthful life the ultimate risk?

LONGLISTED: Walter Scott Prize for Historical Fiction
LONGLISTED: ARA Historical Fiction Prize 2025

'Crackling with energy, irony, wit and terror, The First Friend is a timely and cautionary reminder of the stifling, murderous logic of strong man politics.' — Tim Winton

'Razor-sharp, wildly imaginative, bold, brilliant and often as dark as the inside of a coffin. Another triumph from a truly extraordinary writer.' — Trent Dalton

Malcolm Knox is the author of seven novels and 15 non-fiction books. He is a journalist who has won Australia's top journalism prize, the Walkley Award, three times.

His novels have been translated into Dutch, French, Italian and Spanish.

Cornwall, 1614. In the coastal village of Crantock, a child guards a perilous gift: the power to leave her body and fly with a magic stone. Housekeeper Gunnet Dawes shields the girl as best she can, while teaching her the old tongues, healing lore and forbidden spells.

But England is changing. As the girl grows to be a woman, whispers of witchcraft carry deadly consequences, and the line between healing and heresy grows thin.

When witchfinder Matthew Hopkins sets out to hunt her down, their meeting will change the course of history. In a world that fears what it cannot explain, a story shared is the most potent magic of all.

Rooted in folk magic, and echoing the spirit of R.D. Blackmore's Lorna Doone, this is a haunting tale of dark enchantment, quiet strength and enduring love in a world that would destroy what it cannot understand.

'Barry writes with the soul of the Cornish landscape and language infusing her blood and her pen. Beautiful and entrancing.' — Robyn Cadwallader

'Eloquent and wise, like its compelling narrator, this is one of the finest historical novels I have read.' — Amanda Curtin

Bernice Barry is a writer and historian with a background in education. Her previous books (The Mind That Shines, 2016, A Lady's Pen, 2023, Sarah Evans, 2024,) include historical fiction and non-fiction, reflecting her passion for discovering and telling women's stories where truth has been dimmed or obscured by time.

Originally from Cornwall in the UK, Bernice has lived for twenty-five years on Wadandi country near Wooditjup/Margaret River, researching local history, nurturing a native garden in the bush and spending as much time as possible at the place where land meets ocean. She is a regular presenter and speaker on a wide range of topics from wildflowers and botany, writing and publishing, to history and heritage.

When you are heading towards 40 and people start to notice you a little bit less, what do you do with your new powers of invisibility?

Audrey Mendes is a clever lawyer but has never made partner. Her weeks are filled with long hours in the office, visits to her ageing parents, trivia nights at the local and evenings at home with her pet rabbit, Joni.

When Audrey tries to buy wine at the pub she is ignored and walks out without paying. One thing leads to another, and soon she starts rebelling in small and creative ways against a world in which she is unseen – until a painful reminder from her childhood pushes her into a reckoning.

All the while there's a potential romance and an eccentric new neighbour to deal with. And why does Audrey buy extravagant baby clothes when she doesn't have a child?

Wry, humorous and provocative, this is an affectionate novel about sorting out the past, grabbing onto life and claiming your place in it.

'Wise and darkly funny, with a convincingly lopsided protagonist whose story is full of acute observations on the psychological effects of trauma.'* — Sydney Morning Herald, Fiction Pick of the Week

'A gorgeous reminder that we are all a bit bonkers, thank goodness because wouldn't life be boring if we weren't? I want to be Audrey's friend, and to know what she gets up to next.'* — Meg Bignell

Deborah Callaghan worked as an interstate train stewardess, a librarian, and freelance journalist before starting a thirty-five-year publishing career. She was a book publicist, a publisher, and a literary agent. Her story, Small Details of Travel was longlisted for the 2024 ABR Elizabeth Jolley Short Story Prize, The Little Clothes is her debut novel.

In the year 2000, an Australian woman travels to the Hague to work as the secretary for an Australian judge. There, she sits through the trial of a former military man who has been charged with war crimes. As the trial proceeds, she is confronted with two conflicting impulses: being deeply affected by the testimony of witnesses, while at the same time plagued by an enduring doubt as to the defendant's guilt.

Meanwhile, she begins an unexpected romance and friendship, and these relationships help her to understand the stories of extraordinary survival she hears about during the trial. When she is called back to Australia to reckon with her own childhood, she finds she can't quite leave everything she's heard behind.

Out of the Woods asks what it means to bear witness to the suffering of people who have experienced real tragedy and whether it is possible, afterwards, to resume a normal life. It will appeal to readers of Katie Kitamura's Intimacies and Svetlana Alexievich's documentary novels.

'Shirm's writing is crisp and precise and will undoubtedly appeal to fans of Gwendoline Riley and Charlotte Wood.' - the Guardian

'A triumph. Out of the Woods traces the complex lines of complicity and grief — a deeply compelling and humane story about what it means to bear witness. This is a book that looks into your soul.' - Stephanie Bishop

'This searchingly original novel counters the historical weight of human cruelty with small acts of attention and persistence. Shirm's empathy and intelligent precision exert a quiet moral authority on every page.' - Delia Falconer

'A stunning writer' - Sydney Morning Herald

Gretchen Shirm is the author of Having Cried Wolf, Where the Light Falls and The Crying Room. She was a Sydney Morning Herald Best Young Australian Novelist and both her novels Where the Light Falls and The Crying Room were shortlisted for the Christina Stead Prize for Fiction in the NSW Premier's Awards.

In 2023–2024 she received the BR Whiting Fellowship from Creative Australia. Gretchen's short fiction has been published in Best Australian Stories, Griffith Review, The Australian, Overland, Meanjin and Southerly. Her literary criticism is published widely, including in The Sydney Morning Herald, The Age and The Weekend Australian. Gretchen worked as a public law lawyer for more than a decade and now teaches creative writing.

An intimate psychological portrait inspired by the true story of a notorious cult leader, who taught a mishmash of Christianity and Eastern mysticism, illegally collected children (from forced adoption schemes) and indoctrinated cult members by administering them LSD to convince them she was a female Christ reincarnate.

1987. Family is everything to Anne. Our Messiah. And Anne demands everything from The Family; their loyalty, their money, even their children. In return, she promises existential comfort to lost and weary women. Because Anne knows how hard it is to build a family – and how easy it is to lose one.

1921. A child is born on a sticky summer evening. Our Anne. Her mother, Florence, is trapped at home with an indifferent husband and a relentlessly demanding newborn, struggling to reconcile motherhood and her shifting sense of self.

For both women, the past is for escaping, and love is impossible to trust. All they can hope is that their family will save them.

The Bearcat is a dark and nuanced exploration of longing, power and the inviolable grip of history. It raises very contemporary questions about female agency, determinism and desire.

'A deft and lyrical exploration of the dark currents that run through family life. The Bearcat is a remarkable debut.' – Stephanie Bishop

Georgia Rose Phillips is an award-winning writer who publishes fiction, creative non-fiction, poetry, literary criticism and academic scholarship. Her creative non-fiction novella, Holocene, was runner-up in the 2018 Scribe Nonfiction Prize for Young Writers, and her short story 'New Balance' was a fiction winner in the 2021 Ultimo Prize. In 2022, her short story 'Beyond the Marram Grass' was a shortlisted finalist in the American Association of Australasian Literary Studies (AAALS) Prize.

Georgia is a Lecturer in Creative Writing at the University of Adelaide and holds a PhD in Creative Writing from the University of New South Wales.

I want to let her know that choosing something is the entire problem. How do you choose something without feeling the undeniable loss of everything you rejected?

Max is about to finish high school. On the surface it appears he has everything, but underneath he is floundering. Grappling with questions about his birth parents and his sexuality, he feels that there is a seed of badness deep within him that will inevitably be exposed.

After an incident at the end-of-year party sets Max's world to crumbling, he must finally figure out who he is and where he came from – and who he is allowed to love.

Max is a vivid and insightful coming-of-age novel about the ways we weave the threads of our adolescent identities into a cohesive adult self.

'A vivid, heartfelt and emotionally astute story about a young man's search for himself. I was with Max all the way.'
– Emily Perkins

'Tender, sharp and real. Max is a sensitive exploration of the passion and turmoil of youth.' – Carrie Tiffany

Avi Duckor-Jones trained as a lawyer before gaining his MA in creative writing from Victoria University's International Institute of Modern Letters in 2013. His travel writing has been published with BBC Travel, The NZ Listener and Lonely Planet, among others. Avi has worked as a writing instructor and trip leader for National Geographic, directed a school in Ghana, and is the winner of the reality television competition Survivor New Zealand.

His first book, Swim, won the 2018 Viva la Novella award. He currently lives on Waiheke Island with his wife and two children, where he enjoys open-water distance swimming and works as an English Teacher at Waiheke High School.

What happens if you lose someone integral during your formative years? Grub is twenty-six and outside the house of the person she blames for her brother's death. She's trying to figure that out.

It's Sydney in the early 2000s, and Grub is spending the summer with her universally adored older brother, Elijah, and his magnetic but troubled best friend, Zed. Their days are filled with surfing, swimming and hanging out; life couldn't be better.

But years later, Elijah disappears and Grub's family unravels. At first, Grub blames Zed: he was the one who derailed Elijah from a bright future in the arts. But as Grub looks back at those dreamy summer days, the sanctuary of her certainty crumbles. Was Zed really responsible for her brother's disappearance? Was anyone?

Tidelines is a tender coming-of-age novel about growing up in the face of unimaginable loss. It examines the stories we subconsciously write for ourselves, and what remains later, when we have the courage to tear them apart.

'Beautifully conceived and written, Tidelines is about the faulty but inescapable ties of family and friendship.' — Debra Adelaide

'Tidelines is a wonderful debut novel that weaves the author's medical and scientific knowledge with poetic prose and complex, flawed characters. Sasson is an author to watch.' — Other Terrain Journal

Sarah Sasson is a physician-writer living on Gadigal land in Sydney. She has spent time living overseas in Chicago, Singapore, Montreal, Hanoi and Oxford. In Australia, the UK and the USA, her poetry, short-fiction and creative non-fiction have been published in Meanjin, Medium, Oncology Republic, Grieve Anthology, Unsweetered, Intersection Stories and Orris Root, among other places. In 2021 Sarah edited Signs of Life-an anthology (MoshPit Publishing), a collection themed around first- and second-hand experiences of mental and physical illness, and of caregiving.

Tidelines was shortlisted for the 2020 Varuna House Publisher Introduction Program and longlisted for the 2020 Queensland Writers' Centre Publishable Program under the title Some Things Beautiful. Sarah lives in Sydney with her husband and young children, and works as a clinician and scientist.

In this richly woven tapestry of stories, nine Arab women share their deeply personal journeys of migration, each reflecting on the legacies of their homelands and the complexities of forging new lives.

In their own voices, they explore the challenges of adaptation, the resilience born from adversity, moments of joy, and the enduring ties to their heritage. With unique perspectives, they examine Australian culture while confronting some of the world's most pressing political injustices through the lens of lived experience.

A powerful testament to individuality and community, Don't Ask the Trees for Their Names seeks to dismantle stereotypes in a world that too often simplifies identity. This compelling collection inspires us all to rise above the barriers of sexism and racism, offering an urgent and unapologetic chorus of truth.

The Don't Ask the Trees Collective is a group of nine Arab Australian women writers — Mariam Maatooq, Loubna Haikal, Mary Hanoun Khilla, Sivine Tabbouch, Henda Saab, Kilda Eid, Camilia Naim, Oula Ghannoum, and Nouha El-Khoury Francis — who came together to share their stories of migration, identity, and resilience in the landmark anthology Don't Ask the Trees for Their Names: Stories of Leaving and Becoming.

In a new, uncensored edition, two human rights lawyers break open the ways that our legal system continues to silence and disadvantage women.

Uncensored. Unredacted. Updated.

From the international spectacle of Johnny Depp v Amber Heard and the furore that followed that unwanted kiss at the Women's World Cup final, women are breaking through the historic expectation that they will not speak out. But as they grow more empowered, a new form of systematic silencing is becoming more evident: the spike in survivors speaking out is often followed by a spike in legal actions against them and the media. The law is being wielded to reinforce the status quo that existed before MeToo.

Internationally acclaimed lawyers Jennifer Robinson and Keio Yoshida examine the laws around the world that silence women, and ask how we can ensure that their freedoms are no longer threatened by the legal system that is supposed to protect them.

Because we cannot act if we do not know. If women cannot talk about their abuse—and journalists are fearful of telling their stories—then how can we understand the problem of gender-based violence in our societies? And how can we even begin to end it?

'Witty, gritty, insightful and true, this book is essential reading for all women. Robinson and Yoshida lay down the law, on law, in an accessible way, giving us the ammunition we need, not just to protect ourselves, but to go out there and win.' - Kathy Lette

Jennifer Robinson is a barrister at Doughty Street Chambers in London. She has acted in key human rights and media freedom cases in domestic and international courts. Jen sits on the boards of the Grata Fund, the European Center for Constitutional and Human Rights and the Bonavero Institute of Human Rights at Oxford University.

Dr Keio Yoshida is a barrister in England, Wales and Ireland. Keio is currently a senior legal adviser at the Center for Reproductive Rights, and an associate tenant at Doughty Street Chambers. Keio is co-editor of Feminist Conversations on Peace.

'Intriguing and elegant.' – Sydney Morning Herald

Beneath the palm tree she'd perished like a stone fruit amongst the leaves and insects– her flesh bruised a variety of shades, from black through to yellow; her facial features, for all their lovely detail, completely indistinguishable. Look what happened to me, I could hear her say. This is what they did to me.

In February 2005, German backpacker Simone Strobel went missing in Lismore, New South Wales. Six days later her naked body was discovered, crudely hidden beneath a palm tree. At the inquest into her death the police stated their belief that her boyfriend, Tobias Suckfuell, had killed her, although he has never been charged with any offence concerning Simone.

Writer Virginia Peters was captivated by the case, and committed herself to uncovering the truth. With the agreement of the police, she analysed the evidence, uncovered new lines of investigation and travelled to Germany to interview the couple's families and friends. Ultimately, she tracked down and questioned Suckfuell himself, who remained the prime suspect. Having become intimately involved in the case, Peters came to understand that the story of Simone Strobel's murder was about much more than the crime itself or the investigation that followed.

With echoes of Helen Garner, Have You Seen Simone? explores grief and loss, truth and accountability, and asks whether justice in this case can ever be done.

Virginia Peters grew up on the Kapiti Coast, New Zealand. Drawn to a career in publishing, she began working in newspapers and magazines—but found herself on the wrong side of the office in advertising, using her writing skills to target companies with lengthy marketing proposals. After travelling, marrying an Australian, and having three children in quick succession, she finally decided to pursue creative writing and enrolled in an undergraduate degree at UTS in 2000, majoring in Professional Writing. She then went on to do her Masters, producing a suite of fiction short stories that have appeared individually in Australian literary journals.

A year on from solving a cold case kidnapping, amateur sleuth Gus Green has some closure about his roots, but he's still no closer to reconnecting with his birth mother Jane. That is until he receives a cryptic message telling him that the answers he seeks can be found at a mysterious off-grid community based around an ancient stone circle.

But when they arrive at The Circle, none of the strange people living there know Jane ... or so they say. A brutal storm traps the friends at The Circle and a burnt body is discovered. Gus and his friends quickly realise that the firebug - and murderer - walks among them, and everyone has a motive.

Gus, Kane and Shell find themselves in a race against time to solve the biggest case of their short careers. Can they get to the bottom of the mystery before they become targets themselves? What is the secret of the stone circle? And how on earth does this all connect to Gus's mother?
